Healthcare in Regina

Regina and Saskatchewan have a deep-rooted history in ensuring good, accessible healthcare is available for all its people. While under Canada's free healthcare model, anyone in need has the ability to access healthcare at any stage of their lives and any stage of their health.

Saskatchewan Health Authority

The Saskatchewan Health Authority launched in 2017, transitioning 12 former regional authorities to a single provincial one. It is the largest organization in Saskatchewan, and one of the most integrated health delivery agencies in the country. The Saskatchewan Health Authority offers a full range of hospital, rehabilitation, community and public health, long term care and home care services to meet the needs of everyone in Saskatchewan, regardless of where they reside in the province.
